Christmas Gaming

It's Christmas Eve and James is having a lovely evening meal with his family... or at least that's how he had imagined Christmas. But no! They had to invite Stella, Irene's sister and, as always, she keeps picking on James trying to make him look bad in front of his family. And it's working. His stepdaughter Gina is already looking down on him and his wife is having doubts as well. James gets quite frustrated and thinks back to the good old days when he was gaming in his room... Time for a Christmas miracle! Under the tree he finds a present with a gaming console in it, and when he turns it on it's a Sims-like simulation. But the characters are him and his family? And anything he makes them do in the game happens in real life?! Thank you, Santa!

Featuring

James...	A working man with a family
Irene...	James' wife
Gina...	James' stepdaughter
Stella...	Irene's sister. She hates James.

It's Christmas Eve and James has just finished dinner with his family...

It was a lovely meal, honey.

Thanks, dear!

Irene, James' wife.

James.

You know, you could have cooked yourself, James.

I'm sure Irene's already had enough on her hands putting up all this lovely décor.

Stella, Irene's sister. Does not like James.

Gina, Irene's daughter. James's stepdaughter.

Yeah, Dad! You could have cooked!

Gina, Irene's daughter. James's stepdaughter.

Stella's mean comments show effect and both his wife and step-daughter start thinking less of him making fun of him during the meal and later during caroling.

Then, finally, it's time for presents...

After the singing, it's finally time for presents!

Nice! The biggest is for me!

You are welcome, honey!

O.M.G.!!
The new Chassell beauty bag! Thank you so much, mom!

Hey!
There's one for me as well? Cool!

Of course, I don't get any thanks. Who do you think paid for that, girl?

I wonder what it could be... Please don't let it be socks...

Let's turn this baby on... Oh, nice! It's already juiced up.

A console?! Awesome!

As the game starts, James can't believe his eyes. He finds himself in the character screen and there are already characters resembling him and his family! Had somebody created them in advance? What a lovely idea for a Christmas present!

Wow.
Did... Did they create their characters for me?

That is actually a really thoughtful present! I love it!

3 Lol. It's not from me.

Ha-ha! He probably bought it for himself!

giggle That's so pathetic!

Irritated and disgruntled by their reaction James leaves the Livingroom and starts playing with his new console in his study...

As James keeps thinking suddenly a speech bubble in the game catches his attention... and enrages him.

Stella: You know, sis, your husband is really pathetic. Now he even leaves you alone on Christmas Eve while we do presents!

Irene: Well... we did not get him any...

Gina: Don't defend him, mom! Aunty is right. I don't like him.

The question was so silly considering that character was Stella, his hated sister-in-law... but whatever. It was a game after all. So, James clicked "Yes".

Meanwhile in the real world...

You know, sis, your husband is really pathetic.

Now he even leaves you alone on Christmas Eve while we do presents!

Absolutely not being reprogrammed by the game right now!

Err.. Aunty? Are you okay?

And from there on out James realizes that the game in his hands is much more powerful than your run of the mill computer game...

James could not believe the absurdity of the situation when his bitch sister-in-law dragged him into the master's bedroom and started making out with him heavily. Coincidence? Or was that game influencing her somehow for real?!

First, Stella thought it was a bit rude for James to play on his console while making out...

But on second thought... after James pressing some more buttons...

You just keep playing up there and I play down here.

Oh, my god!

Ewww!

"It's not what it looks like"...
Despite James pleading as his wife and stepdaughter entered the master bedroom... it totally was what it looked like!
